Solid Heavy Duty Construction

Commercial Storage Containers are constructed with 12 or 14 gauge corrugated steel sides. Container frames are made of 6 or 8 gauge steel. Containers also have approximately 1" hard wood pressure treated floors. Each container comes equipped with a cargo door covering the entire end of the container. Cargo doors provide an excellent tight seal, to protect your items from rodents and the elements. They also give you the ability to load large items.

Meets all International Standards Organization Specifications.

Our shipping containers comply with typical ISO specifications allowing your unit to meet height, width and length standards. This important feature guarantees that all equipment handlers, rail cars, slot spaces on vessels will be able to accommodate your unit.

What to Consider Before Renting a Commercial Container.

Containers are designed to be supported at each of the 4 corners. Be prepared to support the ends with a concrete footing, railroad ties, asphalt or a bed of gravel. It is not advised to place the container directly on the ground with no support.

The delivery of a storage container is normally done with a semi tractor-trailer. The trailer that carries the container tilts so the container slides off the bed of the trailer. Because the container slides off the back of the trailer, plan to leave around 40 feet of turn space for the loading and unloading equipment.
